

| Question | Answer         | Mark               | Mark scheme                                                                                                                                                                                             | Additional guidance                                           |
|----------|----------------|--------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------|
| 14 (a)   | C drawn | M1C1           | for drawing a bearing of 060° from A or a bearing of 310° from Bfor drawing a bearing of 060° from A and a bearing of 310° from B and marking the intersection C | Final answer may vary depending on scale of centre's printing |
| (b)      | 1.8            | M1M1A1 | measuring between A and B eg 9 (cm)for using the scale or the conversion eg “9” × 20000 (=18 0000) or (20 000 ÷ 1000) ÷ 100 (= 0.2)1.8                                            |                                                               |